

LOTS SANTA FE HOPPER

ORDER FORM

Few railroading images are as striking or memorable as the Warbonnet paint scheme of the Santa Fe Railroad. Created in 1937 by Electro-Motive Corp. stylist Leland Knickerbocker, this design was the perfect complement to the railroad's recently adopted Native American motif. Born in the throes of the Great Depression, the paint scheme was part of an industrial design trend that emphasized bold designs and the promise of "better days ahead" in an attempt to break free from the harsh economic times.
